GATHERING AT ALBERT HALL.

(Reuter's Service.)

LONDON, November 14 A wonderful reception was given to General Bramwell Booth, by a large gathering of Salvation

Army workers at the Royal Albert Hall to celebrate the General's Jubilee of officership. General Booth was in reminiscent mood, and referred to the days when the Army not only was little known but disliked; when the fondest dreams could not embrace the hope that the Army Flag would fly in seventy to eighty countries as to-day. Many of the speakers came from overseas.

Among them Adjutant Beckett, who alluded to the marvellous work of the Army in China. Lieutenant-Colonel Perera from India also spoke.

NO SWOONING!

HETHER it was that the sun was too bold or the curate too bashful, the Early Victorian young lady had one resource. She swooned away! Always someone fainting or something fading. But it's not so now. Beauty has got to bear up. If your winter clothes have faded and soiled, why, not try our dry cleaning Dept. You will be surprised at the beauty and finish.

Why Women Smile As they never did before

Teeth are prettier today-Millions combat film

Most pictures are now taken with a smile, showing pretty teeth.
Look about you. Note how many smiles now show glistening teeth.
That was not always so.
Millions of people are now using a new teeth-cleaning method.
Every day they six combating the dingy film on teeth. You will also do so when you make this test and see the quick results.

I film is caleightly It is film that makes tests dingy that viscous film you feel. It cliegs to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. If not frequently removed, it may form cloudy coats. It is also the basis of tartar. tests look discontent & holds food substance , which : lerments and

This is by way of an achievement, for the whole world of women, with a few exceptions, was devoted to this conveniently smart little hat, and it will be found that there will be many demands for it, even though other modes may get a fair representation in fashion. Some there are who insist that there will be no cloches at all, but following the, old law that "demand creates supply," one is inclined to doubt this, although it is practically certain that the supply of cloches that answers he-demand will be very different from any cloches we have known. A recent fashion note-cabled direct from Paris -insists that the clocke will remain in fashion-in some form or other-until women grow their hair again, which settles the matter for this season ina most definite way. It is no longer a question of "Shall I bob my hair?" but "What bob is most becoming?"

The Directoire Influence At Work. Prophesied for some months, the Directoire mode is an established fact in the military world, though it has not a really definite place in the mode as a whole. One feels sure that it was seized upon by designers as a possible solution to the problem of change, and it is now, being presented in so many graceful forms that it is reasonably sure of its place in fall fashions. shows itself in the high-crowded models and in the low as well, for even when crowns are low-and everyone does not find height becoming-there a hint, at least; of the squarish line droop over the brim edge or strive for that belongs to this particular period hat. The narrow brim is also a feature of this style, and the narrowex the brim, the higher the crown appears. More often than not the brim rolls, another characteristic of the mode. Even newer than the models in the Directoire manner are the Spanish influenced shapes, and there seems strong movement in their direction, for there must be more than one mode for the coming busy season. The Spanish tendency appears in high hats with a flat: crown and very straight brim -one thinks of Carmen-and turbans, very Spanish in their temperament. direct opposition to the postilion hat, these models have a high back trimming-inspired by the Spanish comband they make use of fringe-Paris is using fringe on all her newest frocks; gives us three working ideas-the shape; and the hat of Spanish inspira- | cocarde of fur, the only trimming on tion. For the woman who was simply fashion. Were it not so, there would rected from other times and other peoples. "What's new in millinery?" millinery?" or "What adaptations?" For the three fashions of the hour are all old, either to a nation or a period. Typical of the unrest that has resulted from the continued popularity of the clocke are the widely differing styles that have been presented, and equally typical the endeavour to show originality in both the placement of trimmings and the trimmings themselves.

Fabrics Are Rich And Beautiful. While there will be novelties, the foundation of the fabric mode will be velvet-both panne and Lyons-felt, hatters' plush and satin. There will be combinations of distinction, making use of two or more of these materials. and the hat and scarf combination that is so popular will feature satin and velvet, linking the scarf to the hat by either the one or the other. The felt hats that are best liked, just now, are self trimmed, and have unbound, edges. Another month may. bring a radical change, but the felt hat will be apparent in the mode in some form or other, for is is the most practical of the four featured fabrics. The latter may height so there is no excuse for an unbecoming arrangement of whatever decoration one chooses. The general tendency is toward a scant use of trimmings, which is occasion for the rather bromidic statement that a hat may be distinguished by what is left off rather than by what is put on. 'More skill is required when trimmings are acant. The sailor type of hat is a tailored type, and one naturally expects bandings to prevail. Hats of this type may be both ribbon bound and ribbon banded, but some show a trim of a single hird's head; a brush effect; or some equally original—and simple effect. Bird's heads are extremely fashionable, and quills, brushes and all sorts of ostrich plumes and fancies are everywhere seen. Showing The Flag.

While it is true to say that our trade in China was created by the British merchants, it is equally true to say that the creation was largely rendered possible by the influence of the British Navy Our overseas naval forces doubtless, bave refreshed the especially in China-have become Generalissimo's memory before much diminished since the war persuading him to confer with the The news that in certain direc-Chinese Judas now at the head tions it is to be brought up to full of affairs in the capital of China. strength, is, therefore the more welcome. One of the best object lessons which modern history can furnish as to the value of showing the flag or naval propaganda as it is termed nowadays—lies in our China trade, writes Sir Herbert Russell in the "Naval and Military Record." The writer points out that the Chinese early realised that a nation, which could send so many fine fighting ships from the other end of the earth, must be a great nation, and that a great nation can only remain so by being an honourable nation, and, therefore, obviously a nation to trade with. The much-hackneyed and rather abused word "propaganda" was never heard in the days when the British Navy was making its deep and lasting impression in China. It did its work simply by the dignified process of showing the flag and giving China to understand, p.m. quietly but firmly, just what that flag stood for. And now the Chinese look to us to protect them against their own pirates. Another point made by Sir Herbert is that middle-aged Chinese recall when Great Britain kept a battle fleet in these waters. Now we only keep a cruiser squadron. The arrival of H.M.S. "Pegasus" and the flight of her sea-planes over the neighbouring territory will assuredly have a most wholesome effect in giving the lie to misrepresentation dictated by trade rivalry. By misrepresenta- land, tion is meant the tales spread, by room, City Hall, 5.30 p.m. perfectly legitimate methods of trade rivalry, that Great Britain is on the down grade and no longer can afford to keep up such a big Navy. SIR LESLIE STEPHEN

- (Special Review.)

If there was a special prize for , mental equipment and intellectual, bridge men like himself amid the worth instead of for beautiful ankles or paddings for new-fangled bathing dresses I think my vote would be given for the late Sir Leslie Stephen-at least umongst those of last couple of generations. There have been others who show. more in one particular sphere, such as Darwin; or who fulminated with a more terrifying thunder, such as Carlyle; but note showed the same intellectual shrewdness, moral alertness and genuine good fellowship, with so few angularities of mind; as Leslie Stephen. If there was an umpire or referee wanted in the intellectual world as there is in the sports' world no man would have filled the position with the same impartial justice as he.

In the Playground of Europe he breathed for his love of the Alps and no less an anthority than Lord Morley ranks it with parts Hawthorne and Charlotte Bronte as reaching the high-water mark of English prose in our time.

There are some books which we should re-read at least every four years-Compromise, The Study of ance), on by Wordsworth when the finest sentence describes a picture Sociology, The Egoist, The Origin of Species, Physics and Politics, and especially Stephen's English Thought in the Eighteenth Century. philosophical, economical, social theory are there handled by a master mind. Few men had a greater natural aptitude for this difficult type of literary analysis and expression. Then, too, he was brough into personal relationship with al the greatest of the Victorian writers then living from Carlyle Pennyson to Ruskin and Thomas Hardy. 'He was brought up in the Faith and took Orders as a priest of the Church of England, but early found that there was no common ground between the doctrines of the Church and the framework of his actual belief. He soon found how impossible it has for him to remain a clergyman, and he called in Thomas Hanly to witness his deed remneintion. This renunciation cut him adrift from Cambridge, and he turned to seek his livelihood in literature. Jokingly he refers the prospective Sinecures he lost by giving inp the Church, but Sir

Leslie Stephen's was not one of those minds which can renounce most of the "doctrines of the Apostles' Creed and yet remain a bishop, or which can swallow any formula as if he liked it. I wish it were possible to awaken the conscience in the matter of resthetics as easily as appears to be possible in morals. We all know true morality as soon as we see it and never afterwards make a mistake about it. Nothing could be ensier. We are never mistaken about wrong-doing-that is, about doings . done not according to our ideas. The mithor of the 'History of Ethics" in this series I remembered at once. I have never heard time does he invest himself and his bages. Somebody would stop him that he is popular. I know of only doings with the salutary magic of

It is not a challenge, but an exposition. I suspect that the orthodox, and most practical statesmen, will strongly dissent from some of the implications in his swift and lucid ; analysis of the history of ethics; but it is a clarifying little book and in a society which is now so badly lumbered with the irrelevant detritus of many philosophies ought to serve the path-finders well. Though it was not intended to do so, for I imagine Mr. Ward would -resent-the suggestion that the good is only good when men begin to see it. For the book's quality, let us take this passage: "If modern. ethics inculcate any practical lesson, it is that of not being hypnotised by the future; from the present must all things be measured. The constructions of history and science, the infinite extension of past and future, have to some extent weakened man's belief in himself. He is encouraged to take what he believes to be broad views; he shows a perverted pride in seeing hiraself-as an infinitely small factor in a movement over which he has no control. Yet he is deceiving himself. Importance is not a matter of size: microscopic views are broad views also. After all, the distance recedes from where he stands: he is the centre of the immeasurable spaces. He may gape at the stars, yet without him the frosty concourse does not run. He goes farthest who goes not at all: who, rather than run races with time, liusies himself with that wherein time enters least, and is bold enough to live, as it has been ordained. for a short hour, for a little while. The engineers established the fact that breaks in the metallic conductors do not completely stop communication, as in the case of a break in the lines connecting the prelinary mine telephones. It is shown that fire, falling rocks, tumbling roofs. explosions, mine-flooding and other disneters; which might cause breaks, will not completely destroy the conductors.

Simple Installation. The installation of a line-radio set is imple. The basic requirement is to lay wire twenty-five to fifty leet in length along the ground, or stretch it along the wall or roof, in a direction approximately parallel to "carriors." The same end may be attained by directly coupling the set to the conductors by the use of suitable enjacities or inductances.

As far as actual installation of apparatile is conserned, the line-radio is con aiderably simpler and can be installed it much quicker time than the present underground mine telephone, - with connecting wires. In the inatter of apparatus, however, the line-radio outfit more complicated than the present simple mips telephone. The future of the new system depends upon development, and the Bureau of Mines expresses the belief that after the line-radio apparatus has been developed to a point where its use for mine communication is to be recom mended, its final adoption; will depend upon the operating conditions prevailing in each individual mine.

Offsets To Expense.

The line-radio apparatus alone will necessarily have a higher expense for up-

. Economic factors play their part in the introduction of line-radio apparatus for emergency usa. The investment in idle equipment is a thing not to be ignored and, it is felt that' the real usefulness of the apparatus in actual rescue work must be determined before the experiments, can bo taken as establishing anal results. With this development there will probably come the evolution of a direct for the outfit in connection with daily operations of the mine litsely When these two things have been accom-Toilshed the general use of mine radio apparatus will doubtless be readily brought about.

One of the chief of them was a hairdresser In an East End suburb, who acted as a kind of central exchange for the whole organization, others were people in · quite menial positions in Portsmouth and other towns.

It is, of course, possible that really good foreign agents defied detection and that we do not know who they were! When Major Trench and Captain Brandon were eaught in Germany investigating what the late Mr. Erskine Childers called "The Riddle of the Sands," they were only one pair out of a number of officers who had undertaken the duty of reporting upon the defences of Germany on its sea coast. All the others got away safely.

damage done by a small collapse of carth, with two engineers, McDermott and Munro, when the catastrophe occurred. Operations for the development of water power in connection with his pulp and paper plants in the district were in progress, and the landslide was caused by the incesssant rains of the past few days undermining the ground. Without warning the parth suddenly fell, burying Sir William and the two engineers. McDermott and Munro managed to scramble to safety through a mass of clay, but Sir William Price was completely entombed. Hundreds of men dug furiously in Tel.
